Operating as a single fully integrated firm, Kinstellar delivers consistently high-quality services across all jurisdictions in an integrated and seamless style. As a full-service firm, Kinstellar can provide startups with practical and strategic advice in all areas of law.

Most important areas in which Kinstellar can help you:

- Intellectual property protection: Startups often have valuable intellectual property assets such as copyrights, utility models, patents or trade secrets. Kinstellar can help to protect these assets through registration, licensing agreements, and litigation, if necessary.
- Contract drafting and review: Startups need various contracts and agreements to establish relationships with suppliers, vendors, customers, and partners. Kinstellar can help draft and review these contracts to ensure they are legally sound and provide favourable terms and conditions.
- Employment: Kinstellar can help startups to comply with employment laws, draft employment contracts, and handle employee-related legal issues such as employee remuneration and employment termination.
- Corporate matters: Kinstellar can help startups to set up their legal structure, provide guidance on effective corporate governance or negotiate shareholders' agreements.
- Data privacy and cybersecurity: Startups often collect and store sensitive customer and business data, which can make them vulnerable to data breaches and cyberattacks. Kinstellar can help establish policies and procedures for data privacy and cybersecurity and provide representation in the event of an incident.
- Mergers and acquisitions: As startups grow and succeed, they may attract interest from potential investors. Kinstellar can assist you in negotiating the investment documentation.
